- The questionnaires asked about some of symptoms and problems for which I sought help.
- I found that the questionnaires were a helpful part of the treatment process.
- I think that the questionnaires could have helped my doctor/therapist understand how I feel.
- I believed that the doctor/therapist was interested in how I answered the questions.
- The questionnaires did not ask about the things that were most important to me.
- My responses to the questionnaires were an honest reflection of how I really felt.
- The questionnaires were too long.
- I was afraid that the questionnaires might be used in ways that there were not in my best interest.
- I was afraid that the questionnaires would compromise my confidentiality. .
